

Case Study: Pandit ChaturLal Memorial Society — 18 Events, 1,000+ Attendees Per Concert, and a Centenary Concert for 1,750

At a glance

Over 3.5 years, I handled Meta Ads marketing for 18 events by the Pandit ChaturLal Memorial Society across Udaipur, Mumbai and Delhi, bringing in at least 1,000 people for every concert. The biggest moment was the Pandit ChaturLal centenary concert at Safdarjung Tomb, where Meta Ads brought in 1,750 attendees on an ad spend of ₹50,000.

Metric	Result
Events marketed	18 over 3.5 years
Cities	Udaipur, Mumbai, Delhi
Total ad spend	₹5 lakh+
Attendance per concert	1,000+
Centenary concert (Safdarjung Tomb)	1,750 attendees via Meta Ads on ₹50,000 (about ₹29 per attendee)
Zinc Pratibha Talent Hunt (this year)	250 entries from Rajasthan on ₹16,000 (about ₹64 per entry)

- Client: Pandit ChaturLal Memorial Society, a society keeping Indian classical music alive in memory of tabla maestro Pandit ChaturLal
- My role: Performance marketing on Meta Ads across concerts, festivals, school programmes and talent hunts
- Channels: Meta Ads (Facebook and Instagram)
- Duration: 3.5 years, 18 events

The challenge

Indian classical music is a niche to fill, and a concert only works if the hall is full on one specific day. Every event was a fresh launch with a fixed date and no second chances, and each one asked for something different from the audience:

- Concerts with legendary artists needed ticket buyers and invitees to turn up in person.
- Festivals like Sakhi Fest needed a wider, more varied crowd.

- School concerts, in collaboration with Shri Ram School and Gyan Bharati School, needed to reach parents and students.
- Talent hunts needed performers to enter, not an audience to attend.

The work also moved across three cities, so each event meant reaching a different local audience.

The artists

Over these 3.5 years I marketed events featuring some of the biggest names in Indian music, including:

- Pandit Hariprasad Chaurasia
- Ritesh and Rajnish Mishra
- Niazi Nizami Brothers
- Grammy-winning Pandit Vishwamohan Bhatt and his son Pandit Salil Bhatt
- Pandit Ronu Majumdar
- Pranshu ChaturLal
- Kumar Sharma

Result 1: The Pandit ChaturLal centenary concert

The flagship event was the centenary concert for Pandit ChaturLal himself, held at Safdarjung Tomb in Delhi, with Sivamani and Anup Jalota performing.

Meta Ads brought in 1,750 attendees on an ad spend of ₹50,000, which works out to about ₹29 for each person who came. For a one-night, once-in-a-generation tribute, the campaign had to put a large crowd in front of a heritage venue, and it did so at a low cost per head.

Result 2: Zinc Pratibha Talent Hunt

The talent hunt asked for something harder than a ticket: people had to enter. In this year's Zinc Pratibha Talent Hunt, we received 250 entries from Rajasthan, all from people playing traditional instruments, on a budget of just ₹16,000. That is about ₹64 per entry, and it brought forward folk and traditional musicians who are hard to reach through ordinary channels.

Results across 3.5 years

- 18 events across Udaipur, Mumbai and Delhi, covering talent hunts, Indian classical concerts, festivals like Sakhi Fest and school concerts.
- ₹5 lakh+ in total ad spend over 3.5 years.
- At least 1,000 people at every concert, the minimum I held each event to.

- A long-running relationship. Three and a half years of repeat work with one society shows the campaigns kept delivering.

Key learnings

1. Treat every event as its own launch. A fixed date, a new city and a new artist each needed a fresh campaign, not a copy of the last one.
2. Big names help, but they still need reach. Even the greatest artists fill a hall only if the right people hear about it.
3. Different goals need different campaigns. Filling a heritage venue, collecting entries from folk musicians and reaching school parents are three separate problems.
4. Low cost per person is a habit, not a one-off. ₹29 per attendee at the centenary concert and ₹64 per talent hunt entry came from the same approach, repeated and refined over years.
5. Long partnerships compound. After 18 events, I knew the audiences in each city, which made every new campaign faster to launch.
