At a glance

At PetSutra, a pet care brand, I grew the Instagram following from 20,000 to 71,600 followers, drove ₹5 lakh in sales through SMS marketing, and led a small team through the brand's rebrand and product launches.

Metric	Result
Instagram followers	20K → 71.6K (3.6x)
Sales from SMS marketing	₹5 lakh
Team managed	2 interns and 1 copywriter
Focus areas	Rebranding, product launches, content pillars, pet account collaborations, influencer marketing

- Brand: PetSutra, a pet care and pet parenting brand (Petbuddy Products Pvt. Ltd.)
- My role: Social media and marketing, covering content strategy, community, influencer collaborations and SMS marketing
- Team: 2 interns and 1 copywriter, managed by me
- Channels: Instagram, SMS, influencer and pet account collaborations

The challenge

PetSutra sells in a crowded, emotional category. Pet parents buy from brands they trust and enjoy following, so the brand had to earn attention in a feed full of cute pet content while also driving sales. The brief covered three things at once: build an audience on Instagram, keep the brand feeling consistent through a rebrand, and turn that attention into repeat customers and revenue.

Growing the audience

The followers grew from 20,000 to 71,600 through a structured content engine rather than one-off viral posts.

- Content pillars. I defined a set of repeatable content themes so the page had a clear, recognisable voice, then tested new formats within each one to see what the audience responded to.

- A content calendar that was always followed. Planning ahead kept the page consistent and let the team work without last-minute scrambles.
- Experimenting with formats. I tested multiple formats across pillars and put more effort behind the ones that earned reach and followers.
- Pet account collaborations. Working with popular pet accounts put PetSutra in front of audiences that already loved pets.
- Influencer marketing. Influencer partnerships added reach and credibility with pet parents.

Supporting the rebrand and launches

I was a core part of PetSutra's rebranding, helping the new look and voice show up consistently across social media. I also supported product launches, making sure each one had content ready for the audience, so the page doubled as a launch channel and not just a feed.

SMS marketing: ₹5 lakh in sales

Beyond Instagram, I ran SMS marketing to reach customers directly and bring them back to buy. This channel brought in ₹5 lakh in sales, which showed that the brand's audience-building work could translate into revenue and repeat orders.

Leading the team

I managed a small team of two interns and one copywriter. That meant assigning work against the content calendar, guiding the interns, keeping copy and visuals on one brand voice, and reviewing output before it went live.

Results

- Instagram followers: 20K to 71.6K, more than three and a half times the starting audience.
- ₹5 lakh in sales from SMS marketing.
- A consistent brand presence across the rebrand and launches, with the content calendar followed throughout.
- A team that could deliver steadily, built from two interns and a copywriter.

Key learnings

1. Consistency beats bursts. A calendar that is always followed builds a brand people recognise and trust.
2. Pillars give you room to experiment. Fixed themes with changing formats show what works without losing the brand voice.

3. Borrow audiences that already love your category. Pet accounts and influencers reached pet parents faster than ads alone.
4. Social builds the audience; owned channels turn it into sales. SMS converted people who already knew the brand.
5. Leading a team is part of the result. Clear briefs and reviews let a small team produce at a steady pace.
